Peach Mountain suspected of sinking PH boat

By Jocelyn R. Uy

THE PHILIPPINE Coast Guard yesterday said a Hong Kong-registered commercial ship was most likely the vessel that rammed a Philippine fishing boat in the West Philippine Sea (South China Sea) on June 20, killing a Filipino fisherman and leaving four others missing.

An investigation by the Coast Guard's West Coast Command found that only one vessel sailed through the area where the accident happened in waters off Batavia town in Pangasinan province.

It was the Hong Kong-registered, 175-meter bulk carrier MY Peach Mountain, which was returning to China from

THE USS Louisville, a Los Angeles-class nuclear-powered attack submarine, arrived on Subic Bay yesterday for a routine port call, according to the US Embassy in Manila.

In a news release, the command said the visit would allow the submarine to refuel and give its crew more than 130 an opportunity to rest.

According to the US Navy website, the Louisville is one of the most advanced attack submarines in the world. Its mission is to seek out and destroy enemy ships and submarines.

The 130-meter submarine was commissioned on Nov. 8, 1986, at the US Naval Base in Groton, Connecticut.

Weighing 5,000 tons, it is armed with sophisticated SSN-48 torpedoes and Tomahawk

China fishing boats leave shoal

By Jerry E. Espinosa

CHINA has made good its promise to pull more than 20 fishing boats out of the waters of Scarborough Shoal, ending tension in its territorial dispute with the Philippines in the West Philippine Sea (South China Sea).

Foreign Secretary Albert del Rosario confirmed yesterday that China has withdrawn the fishing boats from the lagoons.

Based on a coordination between the Philippines and China, as of two days ago, we have received information that all Chinese fishing boats have left the lagoons of Bajo de Malin, Del Rosario said in a statement, using one of two Philippine names for Scarborough Shoal.

The Philippines also refers to the area as Prataing Shoal. China calls it Huangyan Island.

"There are no longer boats from either the Philippines or

China says Asean shouldn't be tool of major powers

China's foreign ministry on Monday said that the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (Asean) should not be used as a tool by major powers to serve their own interests.

The ministry said that Asean should be a platform for dialogue and cooperation among its member states, and should not be used to create a bloc against China.

The ministry also said that China is committed to maintaining the stability and prosperity of the region, and will continue to work with Asean member states to achieve this goal.

The ministry said that China will continue to support Asean's efforts to promote regional cooperation and development, and will continue to work with Asean member states to achieve a common goal.

Gov't rejects all bids for 91-day T-bills

By Russell W. Domingo

The GOVERNMENT yesterday rejected all bids for the 91-day treasury bills while results for the other two issued showed mixed results.

The yield on the 91-day bills rose from 2.60 to 2.65 percent while the yield on the 182-day bills rose from 2.65 to 2.70 percent.

National Treasurer Bulosan B. Tol said yesterday's results showed investors' continued preference for long-term debt paper. "The 91-day bills' low yields show some levels that they want some good returns," he said.

"We are all aware of the fact that the 91-day bills are not as close to secondary market rates."

Aquino for the three-month bills was also weak, with investors tendering only P1.20 billion against the offer of P10 billion. That the government awarded in 100-day bills, however, healthy, was said to have gone up by P1.10 billion.

with state-owned China National Offshore Oil Corp. (CNOC) was a major project that would need much financing.

"There will be a lot of financing that is needed and it is also important to ensure the financing," the President said, adding that "so long as it complies with the rules and conditions as stipulated in the contract, we have no issue with this contract."

Happiness plays a major role in one's health and fitness

By Hilda Felipe Mendez
 Contributor

ALTHOUGH LOTS of people are now into fitness and healthy lifestyles, many are not yet ready to start a physical wellness program because they lack the motivation, inspiration and positive feelings to sustain change.

One type of challenge has empowered experts and health professionals to develop scientific approaches to wellness. Health advocates like the USA Health and Fitness community, the world's leading organization in health and fitness, are now putting more efforts to incorporate campaigns for positive well-being into health care and fitness programs worldwide. One such is improving one's level of happiness for positive health.

Positive emotions

As professionals, we should not focus solely on a client's body fat percentage, or how many repetitions of push-ups he or she can do. Rather, we should also focus on client's positive emotions, not only as a result of exercise, but also based on how they manage their thoughts and actions.

For all fitness and medical experts have a solid foundation in psychology and medical sciences, but our common encounter with clients or patients, based on how we present ourselves in our minds, what we say to them, and what we do, is to our present lives, not how a direct and positive influence in their thoughts and feelings.

Focus on this way, we can influence people's overall well-being.

According to Peter Pank, owner of 1000s Fitness "Your Happiness" program, to successfully change our clients' lives, we should consider not only as fitness professionals but happiness professionals, too.

What is happiness?
 The June 2011 issue of "USA Fitness Journal" presented various definitions of happiness for positive psychology experts:

■ Martin Seligman, known as the father of positive psychology, says, presents in his book, "Flourish: A Visionary New Understanding of Happiness and Well-Being," a broader notion of the well-being theory called PERMA. This model encompasses five measurable elements that contribute to human flourishing: positive emotions, engagement, positive relationships, meaning and accomplishment.

■ According to a study published in the "Journal of General Psychology" by Boris Lyubomirsky, one of the world's leading researchers on happiness, 40 percent of our happiness is within our power to change through the ways we think and act. This shows that we have the power to decide and act on our happiness. The other 60 percent can be controlled not to a given set point or baseline.

Meanwhile, research published in "Psychological Science" by psychology professor and senior scientist Ed Diener suggests that only about 10 percent of our happiness is associated with life circumstances such as money, beauty, marriage and health. This implies that many transformations we create in our lives can make us only 10 percent happier, but we can still do something about it.

Survival

According to Diener, there is a growing body of evidence that happiness is beneficial for one's survival of illness and longevity. In his 2011 review, he concluded that high subjective well-being may add 4-10 years of life compared with low subjective well-being.

A study published in the "Journal of Social Psychology" that tracked over 5,000 men and women for 20 years shows that that emotional vitality (sense of optimism, hopefulness, engagement in life, and the ability to face life's stresses with emotional stability) appears to have the chance of increasing life expectancy.

Aside from better physical health and longer life, Lyubomirsky reports in his book, "The Role of Happiness: A Science Approach to Getting the Life You Want," that the effects or consequences of happiness include higher income, greater productivity and higher quality of work, and more satisfying relationships.

Life strategies

Our current emotional state definitely affects how we can strive to improve ourselves (through physical activities and healthy eating for improved physical health), and how we can give more love and service to the people around us (helps others to improve their lives).

Define your happiness and work on it. What makes you really happy? Think and act on it. Being with and exercising with you spread common values and skills, this makes an effort to communicate your concerns with your partner.

Focus on the positive rather than your flaws. Close doors on, stop, starting your own company, proceed to do so. Focus instead on your good traits and even your best physical features and always remember that character is more important than appearance.

Count your blessings and opportunities. As soon as you wake up, thank God for giving you another opportunity to be happy once again. Think of what you have in your life right now and the opportunities you have in the next 24 hours.

This will help you get started on things that you find difficult to pursue, like another day of being your body by taking care of your health, improving your stress level and embracing your own identity.

Strengthen relationships. Be glad each day for having the most loving and supportive people around you. Remember love and power by being your most radiant self, providing the energy and stimulation to positively influence them.

Learn from your shortcomings and always be ready to get up and start again. Always consider failure and setbacks as an opportunity and learning experience to become a better person. The journey to improved health and fitness requires a sustained effort, every day.

More prevention rather than cure for cancer, diabetes, heart disease

EDISCOVERED PEOPLE are here to help you before their risk factors turn into actual disease. As such, we need to take proactive steps to prevent heart disease, and public health expert Dr. Steven D. Finkelstein.

Speaking during the 4th International Foundation's Duke University Tysons Medical Lecture, Dr. Finkelstein discussed a shift from education and counseling to prevention before the untimely death of someone with an undiagnosed condition. Ramon Jacinto gathers local and foreign musician-friends for an upbeat offering

By Ernesto G. Velasco

WHITEN and Friends of Friends make up Southwestern magazine. Ramon Jackson's plan is in his grandfathering "El Duero" double CD, and the kinship is scintillating.

Most of these collaborations are going players like Jackson, and all are seasonal professions. In the fall is one of still money, and one, and that's always a good thing for the business.

Pinky power

The venue smelt like a telltale arena pop-rock concert lineup, with foreign artists to boot...The Winners, John Ford Coley, Baby Weather (Tina), John Claude Monroee (The Canaries), Marty Garbo and (Beats) Teller (The Blackhearts)...who have already recorded some very familiar hits.

We happily note that the outstanding tracks are those discs performed with Lincoln's local great ones, here used from hand to glove for (right) to combine them together again (definitely not casually): "Lonely Heartings," a Jackie Wilson original, with Byrds' Wilcoxon; "Sweet Is Love," as shared to Gossage, with Imagination; the Lanes, "Sugar in Your Face" (Lincoln's final composition, in our estimation) with Neil Cabergue; "Promp," with Flyburning; and "Lips," with Edmund Brundage, who also wrote the song.

Stadium's Best Exotic belongs to the late, now veritable cult authors that Prince never went so far of... "Bongga Ka Tay" and "Maula." Just Mind Chien shows off perfect fusion of music with traditional and, "Come mostly." He gets out into the redneckery of the country.

Similarly, an account of "Don't Let Go" and "Wish," are not intended to deal with a fresh attitude.

Ergebnisse

We've heard some wonderful things about Richard Dreyfuss, and Jackson must not resemble his opinion of the handwriting-paging crewster. It appears in their work on "One and Only" and "Missing Fox" that Jackson is very comfortable with him, at least their styles, unobtrusively, could use a little more fluff. "Not to be long" with John Ford Coker is not a happy compromise, either.

Parallel

But hey, Tony Bennett's "Stranger in Paradise" with Andrea Bocelli in the album's "Duet 3" album doesn't work as well as may be expected. In that same collection, Bennett's "Don't Be Fooled by the Music Playing" with Aretha Franklin is something close to a masterpiece. Famous individual artists, but these haven't to compete.

Inevitably predictable is the connection that Jackson has, usually, with some of the artists more than the others—for instance, Willem de Kooning and Calvin Tompkins. Inevitably, those three are also the chosen

The constant breaker in "El Duende" is the game's plotting. It's skillful, intricate, but uneven and awkward. Most of it is done by Jacinto using his own brand of guitar. He is rigidly supported in that department by Marínaga, Valente, Borealis, also García, Jonathan Cisneros, and Obed Cisneros-on bass.

Ernie Vitalea very expertly leads the key-board course, with Cameron, Alexis Conilla (playing on most selections), Carlo

WE'RE leaving Scott with your ears

Discussion

Many efforts are a highly and simply proposition. The selection of performers tends to be a personal endeavor on the part of the lead artist, and not a single one of them carries solely on his shoulder the burden of ensuring marketing success. That they therefore do their parts as naturally as they come to them in communication is as different as an intimate offering, handed over with words and a playful grin.
